

Salary Policy

1. Employees who receive a promotion may be eligible for a salary increase reflecting their expanded responsibilities and new role level. Compensation adjustments are reviewed by both Human Resources and department management to ensure alignment with the company's compensation framework.
2. Non-managerial employees who work approved overtime hours are entitled to overtime compensation in accordance with local labor regulations. Overtime pay rates may vary depending on working days, weekends, or public holidays. Unauthorized overtime may not be compensated.
3. Employee salary information is considered confidential and should not be disclosed without authorization. However, the company is committed to maintaining transparent compensation principles and provides salary range guidance for major job levels and positions.